'Walk for Peace' unites anti-nuke supporters

By Mark Smith
Kaimin Reporter

The rising tide of anti-nuclear weapons activism became apparent Saturday afternoon when about 250 people participated in a "Walk for Peace" through downtown Missoula to a rally in Caras Park.

Mike Kadas, director of the Student Action Center and a speaker at the rally, said its purpose was to express "a growing solidarity" among those opposed to nuclear weapons.

Both political and religious leaders spoke at the rally after the peace walkers arrived from Hellgate High School.

John McNamer, author of Initiative 91, said to the crowd, "How sweet it is. Six months ago you and I were kooks, radicals or communist sympathizers to be looked down upon and ridiculed because we dared to be concerned about the nuclear arms race and to express that concern."

Initiative 91, if passed, would be a statement to the U.S. government that Montanans are against the deployment of the MX missile in Montana and that they oppose the nuclear arms race.

Another concern of the rally, McNamer said, was to keep the public aware of the issue.

Beth Loehnen, of the Missoula Women for Peace, expressed that idea when she said (referring to the public), "The sleeping giant is slowly waking. All over the world it is gradually opening its eyes. Its dream is ending and the stark reality of total destruction is forming a picture in its mind's eye. We must be relentless in our efforts to keep it awake and prod it to action."

Montanans, McNamer said, "are on the leading edge of history in the making. We, as the united people of a key state, are going to strike a powerful blow against nuclear arms race insanity."

McNamer urged the crowd to work toward passage of the initiative and said, "Let the message go out — don't mess with Montanans."

Libertarian candidate Larry Dodge supported the initiative and said at the rally that the MX "represents a new level of totalitarianism" and "also makes Montana both the target and the trigger of international holocaust."

The Rev. James Hogan, of the Holy Family Parish, called upon

Christians to take a more active role in nuclear protest and said, "If we are a people that profess to believe in God, then that belief has to penetrate our actions."

Hogan said, "I have difficulty understanding how I can proclaim to believe in Jesus and at the same time proclaim the validity of possessing or ever using the weapons we keep in our closets."

The world, Hogan said, "was created by a god that loves us and who asks only one thing of us and that is that we would live with one another as brother and sister with love and caring."

Ludvig Browman, of the Institute of the Rockies, summarized the purpose of the rally when he told the crowd, "Peace in this age is a minimal survival must."

Also speaking at the rally were Dr. Paul Loehnen of the Missoula Physicians for Social Responsibility, Jeff Dumas of Vietnam Veterans of Montana, Bettina Escudero of Montanans for Peace in El Salvador, and the Rev. Lynne Fitch of the Christian Campus Ministries.

Education dean finalists selected

By Joel Lundstad
Kaimin Reporter

Five finalists have been selected from nearly 130 applicants to be interviewed during April for the position of dean of the University of Montana School of Education.

The finalists will visit the UM campus for two days during April. Tours of UM and Missoula are scheduled for candidates, in addition to meetings with UM President Neil Bucklew and UM Academic Vice President Donald Habbe. The finalists also will meet with faculty and students from the School of Education.

After screening each applicant, the Education Dean Search and Screening Committee will recommend a candidate to Habbe, who will make a recommendation to the Montana Board of Regents. The regents will make the final decision and the appointee will begin work July 1.

The appointee will replace Albert Yee, who resigned Nov. 30. Yee's resignation became effective at the end of Winter Quarter. John Hunt, a faculty member of the School of Education was named acting dean for Spring Quarter.

The finalists are:

- Alden Moe, who is chairman of elementary education and associate professor of education at Purdue University, West Lafayette, Indiana. Moe received a doctorate in education/educational psychology and child development from the University of Minnesota at Minneapolis.

- John Brownell, who is a research associate at the Center for Cultural and Technical Interchange Between East and West, Inc., in Honolulu, Hawaii. Brownell received a doctorate in education and social science from Stanford University.

- David Byrne, who is dean of education and professor of educational management and development at New Mexico State University. Byrne has a doctorate in educational foundations from the University of Utah, Salt Lake City, Utah.

- James Cox, who is a professor of chemistry and education at the University of Montana. Cox received a doctorate in education from Montana State University.

- John Pulliam, who is a professor and area chairperson for the Social, Philosophical and Historical Foundations of Education and the director of the Professional Degree Program in Education at the University of Oklahoma at Norman. Pulliam received a doctorate in history and the philosophy of education from the University of Illinois at Urbana.

Alden Moe will be the first finalist to be interviewed. He will visit the UM campus today and Wednesday.

Punkers show off their stuff at New Wave fashion show

By Joanne DePue
Kaimin Reporter

Lya Badgley's days are anything but idle. The 24-year-old Missoula resident is the owner and operator of a local used record store, designer and sometime seamstress of a line of New Wave clothing and the host of an early Saturday morning KUFM radio show.

Friday night Badgley presented one of her more ambitious projects, a fashion show featuring her own "Reactive Wear" designs, modeled to dancing she choreographed herself. "I'm still recovering," she said Monday at her 131 E. Main St. store, Urbane Renewal.

According to Badgley, the purpose behind the fashion show, besides having fun, was to educate people about what is happening in the world of urban fashion.

The show, which took place at Missoula's Circle Square Community Center, also featured merchandise from two local used clothing stores, Carlo's One Night Stand and the Dovetail.

Twenty local models wore the designs before a largely appreciative audience of about 50. "I purposely chose people (for models) who don't normally dress that way," Badgley said, referring to the designs, which included brightly-colored plastic mini-skirts and a pair of blue jeans with one leg wrapped in black electrician's tape.

Badgley began designing clothes in Seattle about two years ago after an unsuccessful attempt to start an all-girl band. Although she has had classes in retail management, Badgley has never taken courses in fashion design.

She said she began to have ideas about clothing designs during her travels in Europe. Badgley lived in Paris and London after her graduation from Hellgate High School in 1975.

Urbane Renewal, according to Badgley, "isn't a punk shop, it's a contemporary shop." The store features a wide range of music from classical to New Wave as well as Badgley's designs and contemporary art by local artists.

Badgley said the art, which adorns the walls of the store, creates "a mood of relaxed humor," and serves to remind people that "we're all kids sometimes."

"The main reason for the store is not so I can buy a hot tub, but to make people aware to the good things happening in the world," Badgley said.

Badgley said she would also like to make people understand that her store is for everyone, and that she doesn't promote a violent outlook on life.

"Backstage at the fashion show was like a love-in, there was so much positive energy," she said. "Too many people get caught up in promoting violence. I'm glad we didn't have to deal with anyone like that."

Badgley plans to stage more fashion events in the future and said she would someday like to do a more drama-oriented dance production.

In addition, Badgley said she will sponsor art showings for local artists at her store.

Badgley will continue to buy used records over the counter if they are in good condition, and hopes to triple her inventory by the end of the summer.

She said she will also begin to stock merchandise from a garment manufacturer in New York City, with the first shipment of jeans due to arrive sometime this week. "I will try to keep the prices as low as possible to keep the clothing accessible to younger people who don't have much money," she said.

Her 2 a.m. to 5 a.m. KUFM radio show is titled "Music For Moderns," and focuses on New Wave music not normally heard on most radio stations. Badgley said the show is a way to expose people to new music.

Badgley said her involvement in various projects allows her to get in touch with her emotions. "I like to enjoy things on a level of the heart."

LOST: Reagan's 'mandate'

If Ronald Reagan received a mandate from the U.S. people to carry out his programs when he was elected president, he has since lost it.

According to an Associated Press-NBC News poll taken last week, about as many people think that the president's economic program is hurting the nation (36 percent) as think it is helping the nation (37 percent).

And small wonder. At 9 percent, the unemployment rate is now the highest since the 1930s. And estimates of the budget deficit for fiscal year 1983 have gone from Reagan's earlier predictions of a mere $91.5 billion to $124 billion.

Kaimin editorial

Thirty-four percent of the U.S. people have less confidence in Reaganomics than they did a year ago, the poll shows, compared to 15 percent who have more confidence. In January, the polls had shown a more even split — 23 percent had less confidence, 22 percent had more.

The latest poll also shows that 38 percent of the U.S. people believe that the Reagan economic program has hurt people such as themselves and that 13 percent believe it has helped people such as themselves. It is predictable that those with lower incomes more often said that the program had hurt people such as themselves, as Reagan's programs seem to have a knack for not helping the people who need help.

Almost half — 45 percent — of the people said that unemployment is the most important economic problem for the government to control.

But a few weeks back, Reagan showed his insensitivity to the unemployment problem while he complained that the press was focusing on the negative aspects of the economy.

"Is it news," he asked, "that some fellow in South Succotash someplace has just been laid off . . .?"

It is news — it is important — because too many men and women can't get jobs, especially full-time jobs, in small towns or in bustling cities. It is important because those people are the reality behind the highest unemployment rate since the Great Depression.

In his radio broadcast Saturday, Reagan admitted that his economic program hasn't worked. "Well, of course it hasn't," he said. "It hasn't really started yet."

On Sept. 18, 1981, Reagan responded to a charge that the program wasn't working by saying, "Well, of course, it didn't work. It doesn't go into effect until Oct. 1."

Saturday, Reagan said that an increase in Social Security taxes had negated the beginning of the program. The program will really begin this July, he said.

Unfortunately, excuses won't solve this country's economic woes. For not having started yet, the Reagan economic program has already done a heck of a job on the U.S. people.

Missoula School District No. 1 Trustees:
Charles Briggs
Don Snively
Missoula County High School:
District A, 1 year term
Dave Alt
3 year term (2 positions)
F. Joseph Wahl
Ruth Card
District B, 3 year term (1 position)
Sandra West

We urge all students, faculty and staff to vote in this important election on April 6.

Dig, don't spray

Editor: I ask you to consider the following alternative to spraying dandelions on the campus this spring.

Aber Day is coming. Students are accustomed to putting in a day of free work to beautify the campus. I realize the turnout of working students has not been tremendous the past few years but I think the reason for this is that they were not given meaningful work to do. Raking non-existent leaves and picking up a few cigarette butts is not meaningful work.

Digging dandelions as an alternative to spraying is meaningful. I believe students would rally to the cause with enthusiasm.

Two steps taken by the administration ahead of time are necessary to assure a successful dandelion-digging Aber Day:

- Physical Plant must purchase—now—a proper supply of dandelion diggers.
- Administration must delegate authority through the proper channels to assure effective publicity far enough ahead of time to stir up enthusiasm among the students.

I believe all this is possible.

Sincerely,
Kim Williams

Go Griz

Editor: It is disgraceful to know that this university does not have a dome for our aspiring athletes. My god, we can't allow Larry Donovan, head coach of the "Team of the 80" to get kicked in the stomach by studs any longer!

Let's get those D9 Cats out on that useless riverfront property, tear up the land and erect this heavenly Dome as soon as possible. Gee, it could be designed just like a Ford showroom, complete with free hotdogs and Coke on recruitment day!

No longer will our fearless football coach be ashamed to bring recruits to our university. No sir, with this new dome the athletes of the world will be begging on their hands and knees to be part of our proud learning center.

Funding? No problem, just cut a few faculty positions and decrease the others' salary. I'm sure the majority of the professors would love to do anything humanly possible to help the cause. ASUM could help also. Why fund un-American sports like soccer, rug- and skiing? Gee, they could donate at least $100 by eliminating funding for these worthless sports.

Just think, I could sit with 20,000 other screaming fans! Wow, it sends shivers down my back, it would be the climax of my college career!

Yeah, Harley, I think we've all had enough but I have one question for you: How do you see the light at the end of the tunnel when you are so far up it?

Go Griz Rah Rah
Your loyal fan
Ted Barnwell

Letters policy

Letters should be typed (preferably triple spaced), no longer than 300 words (although longer letters may be printed — or cut for space reasons), signed with the author's name, class and major (as well as address and telephone number, for verification purposes only), and mailed or brought to the Montana Kaimin, J206. Unless otherwise requested in writing, the Kaimin will correct spelling and capitalization errors and put letters into our usual format but make no other corrections, except when over-long letters need to be cut. The Kaimin is under no obligation to print all letters received; potentially libelous letters will be returned to the authors for revision, and anonymous and pseudonymous letters will not be accepted.

Public forum

Editor: Allow me to get into the heart of the matter right away. After all, I am a Muslim and have nothing against the Islamic Revolution of Iran. But this is written to those who provided us with the "Real Reason!"

So, you truly believe that Arabia and its corrupt rulers, Israel and its Zionist leaders, the Kremlin and the entire United States are out to destroy your glorious Islamic Revolution. Perhaps you are right. But, if you may, allow me to give you a few tips on the subject.

Your editorial (letters, March 4) showed your political immaturity and conveyed nothing but your narrow-minded way of thinking. Khomeini dreams of an Islamic Empire that died a few hundred years ago. The claim that Saddam Hussein is bloodthirsty is empty and ridiculous and indelicate. How far away is Khomeini from begin a bloodsucker? Who has the firing squads? And why? Khomeini or Saddam?

Where did you come up with the information you wrote. Your lies brightened my day and made me energetic, so energetic, that I decided to respond, too. What sources did you use to obtain such objective, unbiased and trustworthy information? No doubt, it all came from the Holey city of Qum. How did you know that America prompted the mighty Saddam to attack innocent Iran?

A few years ago, people like you went into the streets of Tehran and overthrew the criminal Shah. We rejoiced and welcomed the change. But, unfortunately, you replaced the SHAH with demoniacal serpent. You attacked the West and its technology. You proposed to take Iran, back to the Age of the Quran and the sword, away from the West. But your actions puzzled me. You are still using Western tanks (precisely, tanks that you brought from Israel) and American planes and missiles. That is not to mention that Khomeini's cassette revolution was played on Japanese tape-recorders. In this respect, you are fooling yourself only.

If you do not approve to the West, may I ask why you are studying computer science (What is a computer in Persian) and physics. It does not take either one to design a veil or to assemble a tent.

The war in Iran was engineered by the revolutionary council in hope to buy some political and social stability. But it does not seem to be working. And now Iran sits on a time bomb that will explode soon. The attempts to unite the Iranian people and rally them behind the flag (made of Western material) are failing.

Another stimulant, for Khomeini's deviated actions is a goal set by him to re-establish an Islamic Empire centered in Qum. Khomeini's dreams are turning into nightmares! And more and more, it is becoming more obvious that Khomeini's popular support is declining sharply . . . Is that an indictive of corruption?

As I recall, the person who gave the speech to which you responded was a fellow native (born and bred in Iran). Why should we believe you and not him.

Finally, my advice to all of you is that if you believe that Iran's revolution is in danger, why do you not go back and fight. Iran needs fighters, not Western education, as you always claim!!

Abdulmajeed Kadri
senior, pre-engineering

World news

THE WORLD

• British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington resigned yesterday taking responsibility for a diplomatic failure to prevent Argentina's seizure of the Falkland Islands. Carrington quit only hours after the aircraft carrier Invincible leading Britain's mightiest fleet since the Suez crisis 26 years ago, departed the naval base at Portsmouth on an 8,000-mile voyage to recapture the Falklands, which Argentina seized Friday. Carrington's resignation was accepted by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

THE NATION

• The economic health of Lead, S.D. is as good as gold—and that spells trouble. Thirty-three workers lost their jobs April 1 at the Homestake Mining Co., the first layoffs at the mine in 40 years. Falling gold prices mean that the remaining 1,650 workers will see a slight drop in their paychecks. The Homestake operation, which produces

30 percent of the gold mined in the United States, is the largest industrial employer in western South Dakota.

• The longest high-level harmonic tremor ever detected at Mount St. Helens coursed through the volcano yesterday as scientists wondered about what comes next. The tremor was first detected by seismographs about 2 a.m. and had not diminished by late yesterday afternoon. The rhythmic underground movement signifies the movement of molten rocks or liquid.

MONTANA

• Montana Power Co. forecasts a 130-percent increase in natural gas rates and more than a doubling of electricity rates during the next 10 years, but the company is sticking to its belief that natural gas will remain the most inexpensive source of traditional energy. The company also says that Montana's demand for electricity will continue to grow at a pace greater than newly forecast for the rest of the Pacific Northwest region.

Iranian victories cause concern

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran's recent victories over Iraq in the Persian Gulf war have triggered new concerns by conservative Arab rulers that Iran may intensify its efforts to export the Islamic revolution.

They see a weakening of Iraq as creating new pressures in the volatile Middle East.

Yesterday, Iranian Prime Minister Hossein Musavi urged Arab neighbors to sever all links with the United States, saying in a speech broadcast by Tehran radio that "there is no reason for you to fear us, you should be afraid of the United States."

"We say the Persian Gulf is an Islamic gulf and should remain so," Musavi said. "The hands of the United States should be cut from the Persian Gulf until the Indian Ocean."

Arab diplomats in Beirut who did not wish to be identified foresee serious developments in the middle East from Iran's latest victories in its 18-month-old war against Iraq.
